

What Matters Most To Me

Tamara K. Gross

1994

A mother must be patient
And able to endure
Somewhere an unwritten law
Calls for love that's strong and pure
Gentle and forgiving
A mother's eyes can see
Her baby's secret hopes and dreams
That's what matters most to me

*What matters is the love she gives
When the world is holding out
And what matters is her confidence
When I'm shaken by my doubt
Whether I'm wayward or just testing out my wings
It's my mother's love that matters most to me*

I watched her marriage struggle
At times her sorrow showed
But even at the hardest times
There was love to fill our home
Now someday I might marry
And when our two has grown to three
I only pray my baby learns
He is what matters most to me

*What matters is the love I give
When the world is holding out
And what matters is my confidence
When he's shaken by his doubt
Whether he's wayward or just testing out his wings
It's my love for him that matters most to me*

Nothing compares to the bond
Between a mother and child
O nothing satisfies my heart
Like the love that gave me life

Unconditional love
That's what matters most to me
